Why Have Board Job Descriptions?

The Societies Act regulates nonprofit societies in Alberta. Bylaws are required to incorporate as a registered society. These bylaws must contain a provision for electing and removing board members and officers. Bylaws must also describe the duties, powers and payment of these individuals.

The Act does not specify how many officers, or which officers, you need. However, you need a minimum of a chairperson or president and a secretary in order for the board to function effectively. The chairperson provides leadership and organization for the board. The secretary deals with the business aspects of the board.

Most boards find that it takes more than two officers to do all of the work required. Your board must decide how many board members you need, what officers you need, and how much authority you assign to each position. Job descriptions are an effective method for gathering this information.

There are other reasons to develop good job descriptions for your board members. You must know what you are expected to do as a board member and how that relates to others you work with. Clear job descriptions save valuable time and promote good relations among board members and staff.

A board must decide what it expects of a board member. The board communicates its expectations and standards to prospective candidates during the recruitment process. A written job description is used to orient new board members and to evaluate current board members' effectiveness.

Why Have Board Job Descriptions?

A Board Job Description outlines:

- the role of the board position
- the responsibilities of the board position
- the duties of the board position
- performance expectations
- length of term
- review dates of the position
- benefits of being a board member
- time and financial requirements

There are more reasons to have good job descriptions:

- A job description makes tasks more manageable. Clearly defined and evenly distributed tasks reduce volunteer burnout.
- A job description shows board volunteers how they fit into the organization. The board member feels more involved and committed.
- A job description gives a clear idea of the organization's expectations, such as time commitments and financial requirements.
- A job description allows for the board volunteer's suggestions for the job requirements. Together, the organization and board volunteer can evaluate performance and recognize achievement.
- A job description makes board recruitment easier. Prospective volunteer board members are more likely to serve on your board if their role is clearly defined.

It can be time consuming to write job descriptions for your board. What tangible benefits do you see for your board in developing written job descriptions?

Why Have Board Job Descriptions?

What is your ideal Board size?

Cyril Houle writes in Governing Boards: Their Nature and Nurture that a board “should be small enough to act as a deliberative body...[and] large enough to carry out the necessary responsibilities.”

It is a good idea to evaluate the size of your board before you develop job descriptions. Your current board size may be based on past history or structures that do not reflect your current needs. You need a certain number of informed decision makers with the skills to carry out the work of your organization. You must decide what that number is.

Take a moment to review the size of your board. Is the work getting done effectively and efficiently?

1. How large is your board?
2. How many board positions do your bylaws allow your organization to have?
What are they?
3. List reasons why this board size works for your organization.

Why Have Board Job Descriptions?

4. List reasons why this board size does not work for your organization.

5. List reasons why you might want to increase or decrease the size of your board.

Reasons to increase:

Reasons to decrease:

6. What does your ideal board look like?

Why Have Board Job Descriptions?

7. What needs to be done to move towards your ideal board?
For example, do you need to change your bylaws?

What Type of Board Do You Have?

This workbook is designed for members of Governing Boards. A Governing Board of an independently incorporated organization is elected by the membership. The board is the body responsible for the organization's highest level of decision-making and legal authority. By law, the governing board is accountable for, and has authority over, the affairs of the organization.

The board is made up of individual board members acting together as a whole. Any board determines and communicates the purpose and scope of the organization. This is called the organization's vision. The vision defines the boundaries within which the organization operates.

Governing Boards are responsible for:

- PURPOSE - determining what community need(s) the organization wishes to address and how they will fulfil it.
- PROGRESS - setting the rate at which the organization takes on activities, programs and services to fulfil its purpose.
- CONTINUITY - making sure that there are enough financial and human resources in place to guarantee the existence of the organization.
- IDENTITY - clarifying to the community the organization's values, beliefs, and services.

What Type of Board Do You Have?

There are two types of governing boards: Policy Governing and Administrative Governing. Both types of boards have the same roles, responsibilities and functions. Both make policy. They are different from each other in how they carry out these functions.

- The Policy Governing Board governs the organization by making policy. This policy determines the long-term direction of the organization. The board hires a senior staff person such as an executive director to implement the board's policies, and to manage the day-to-day business of the organization. The executive director is accountable to the board. Front-line staff and service volunteers are accountable to the executive director. These staff members and volunteers implement programs and services.
- The Administrative Governing Board also governs through policy making. However, it may implement some of the policies and plans itself. The board may assign its Executive Committee to implement policies and manage the organization. The Executive Committee carries out the roles, responsibilities and functions of an executive director. The Executive Committee is accountable to the board as a whole. An administrative governing board has no paid senior staff to manage the organization. However, it may have other paid staff, such as cashiers, bookkeepers or daycare workers, to implement programs and services.

Your board job descriptions must reflect the type of board your organization has.

What Type of Board Do You Have?

Is your board a policy governing or an administrative governing board?

If you have a policy governing board, who is the senior staff person who manages your organization?

If you have an administrative governing board, what structure or method do you use to manage the organization?

How to Develop a Board Member's Job Description

Many board members serve for months before they really understand what they are supposed to do. This confusion can waste valuable time and energy for your organization. Clearly written job descriptions cut through the confusion.

The first job description to develop is for the general board member. This job description applies to every member of the board.

Your board member's job description may be simple or complex, depending on your organization. The job description contains the following information:

Position	What is the job title?
Authority	What authority does the position have?
Responsibility	Who is it accountable to? What are the broad areas of responsibility?
Requirements	What is expected of board members?
Term	How are board members elected and for how long? How do board members leave the board?
General Duties	What are the typical duties board members are responsible for?
Evaluation	How will board members' effectiveness be assessed?
Review Date	When will this job description be reviewed?
Approval Date	When was it last approved?

Your board must approve the job descriptions for your board members.

How to Develop a Board Member's Job Description

When you use the job description to recruit board members, add three pieces of information:

Qualifications and Skills

What specialized or practical skills are needed to do the job?
What human relation skills, such as communication and problem solving, are needed?

Benefits

What benefits can a board member expect to receive? This might include:

- satisfaction of making a difference in the community
- opportunity to work with individuals of diverse backgrounds
- development of effective decision-making skills
- increased understanding of group dynamics and relationships

Time and Financial Requirements

What is a realistic estimate of the time required to be a board member?
What will it cost to be a board member?

See Appendix 1 on page 48 for a form you can use to calculate time and financial requirements for board members.

On the next page is a sample job description for a board member of a Policy Governing Board.

How to Develop a Board Member's Job Description

(Name of the Organization) JOB DESCRIPTION

Position: BOARD MEMBER

Authority and Responsibility

The Board of Directors is the legal authority for (Name of the Organization). As a member of the Board, a Director acts in a position of trust for the community and is responsible for the effective governance of the organization.

Requirements

Requirements of Board membership include:

1. Commitment to the work of the organization.
2. Knowledge and skills in one or more areas of Board governance: policy, finance, programs, personnel, and advocacy.
3. Willingness to serve on committees.
4. Attendance at monthly Board meetings.
5. Attendance at meetings of assigned committees.
6. Attendance at Annual General Meetings.
7. Attendance at membership meetings.
8. Support of special events.
9. Support of, and participation in, fundraising events.
10. Financial support of (Name of the Organization).

How to Develop a Board Member's Job Description

Term

Directors are elected by the membership at the Annual General Meeting. Directors serve for a two-year term. Directors may be released at the end of the elected term, by resigning, or according to (Name of the Organization)'s bylaws.

General Duties

A Director is fully informed on organizational matters, and participates in the Board's deliberations and decisions in matters of policy, finance, programs, personnel and advocacy.

The Director must:

1. Approve, where appropriate, policy and other recommendations received from the Board, its standing committees and senior staff.
2. Monitor all Board policies.
3. Review the bylaws and policy manual, and recommend bylaw changes to the membership.
4. Review the Board's structure, approve changes, and prepare necessary bylaw amendments.

Evaluation

A Director's performance is evaluated annually based on the performance of assigned Board requirements and duties.

Review Date and Approval Date

The Personnel Committee annually reviews the Board Member Job Description.

Recommended changes are presented to the Board.

Approval Date: _____

Review Date: _____

NOTE: A board member job description for Administrative Governing Boards should also spell out management or implementation duties expected of board members. This is necessary because there is no executive director or senior staff.

How to Develop a Board Member's Job Description

A job description cannot detail everything expected of board members. For example, a board expects individual members to act with integrity and to use ethical conduct as they carry out their duties. A board member's commitment includes proper use of authority and appropriate group and individual behaviour when acting on behalf of the organization.

Many boards are adopting codes of conduct to cover these important issues. Find a sample code of conduct in Appendix 2 on page 49.

Job Descriptions for Officers of the Board

In addition to a job description for every Board Member, you will develop job descriptions for every officer of your board. Your organization's bylaws contain a brief description of officer positions. You need a more detailed job description to clearly explain these important jobs. These job descriptions contain the same types of information as the general board member job description:

- Position
- Authority and Responsibility
- Requirements
- Term
- General Duties
- Evaluation
- Review date and Approval date

Board officers have additional responsibilities to make sure that the board's work is completed. Remember that no board member has more authority than another, even if they hold different positions.

For example, the president of a board provides leadership to the board and usually chairs board meetings. However, the president of a board does not have the authority to veto board decisions. Board policies and decisions can only be changed through motion and a board vote as described in the bylaws.

So what do board officers actually do? The following section contains information on duties for specific board positions. Use these pages to check off duties and responsibilities which apply to your situation. You can use the additional space to add duties and responsibilities that are not covered.

It remains vacant until there is another past Chairperson.

Job Descriptions for Officers of the Board

The Board Committee Chairperson

The Board creates Board committees to help do its work. Effective committees require effective chairpersons. A careful job description helps the chairpersons do their best work for the organization.

The number and terms of reference for Board committees will vary, depending on the size and nature of the organization. You must decide which committees your organization needs. Finance and Nominating Committees are common Board committees.

Board of Director's Code of Conduct

Board Members need to demonstrate ethical and professional conduct to maintain the confidence of the membership and the public. This commitment includes proper use of authority and appropriate actions in group and individual behaviour when acting as Board Members.

1. Board Members must be loyal to the interests of the membership over and above any:
 - loyalty to advocacy or interest groups, and membership on other boards or staffs.
 - personal interest of any Board Members acting as an individual consumer of this organization's services.

2. Board members are trustees of public confidence and securities. They must avoid any conflict of interest.
 - There must be no self-dealing or any conduct of private business or personal services between any Board Member and the Society. Exceptions can occur only when there is openness, competitive opportunity, and equal access to information.
 - Board Members must not use their positions to obtain employment within the Society for themselves or their family members.
 - If a Board Member is considered for employment, he or she must temporarily withdraw from deliberation, voting and access to applicable Society information.

Appendices

3. Board Members must not exert any individual authority over the Society except as stated in the Societies' policies.
 - Individual Board Members do not have any authority to speak for the Society when they interact with staff, the public, the press and other entities unless granted this authority by the whole board.
 - Board Members must not make any judgments of staff performance except if the performance is officially assessed against Society policies.
4. Board Members deal with outside entities or individuals, with clients and staff, and with each other using fair play, ethics and straightforward communication.
